V 次の英文を読み、あとの問いに答えなさい。

Katie didn't have a favorite color. She wanted to find her own special color. So, she got a piece of paper and a crayon and asked her family what their favorite colors were.

Katie went into her little brother's bedroom. He was playing with his toys.

"What is your favorite color?" she asked.

"Blue," he said, as he put his toys down.

""

"Blue is the best!" he said. "It's clouds at night and story time, and it tastes like blueberries."

Katie wrote "blue" on her paper and went to the dining room. Her big brother was doing his homework.

Katie asked him, "I want to know your favorite color."

"Red," he replied.

Katie smiled. "Why red?"

"Red is awesome! It's fast like a racecar.

Katie wrote "red" on her paper and went to the back door. She opened the door and said, "Daddy, what's your favorite color?"

"It's purple."

"Why purple?"

"Purple reminds me of taking a boat out into the ocean during sunset. And it reminds me of catching a big fish."

Katie wrote "purple" on her paper and went to the kitchen.

"Mommy, what's your favorite color?" Katie asked.

"Green," she said.

"Why green?" Katie asked.

" It also smells like fresh peppermint."

Katie wrote "green" on her paper and went to her bedroom. She read her memos out loud, "blue, red, purple, green."

Katie wondered, "Why don't I have a special color like everyone else?"

She spent the day calling friends asking everyone ① the same question.

Katie's piece of paper now had so many colors on it. She had two blues and reds, three purples and greens, more pinks and yellows, and even browns and grays.

Then Katie noticed something. Nobody chose the color orange.

Why wouldn't anyone choose orange, she wondered. Poor orange.

That night Katie was still ② [think] about colors in bed. Then her mother came in.

"Have you ③ [find] your special color, Katie?"

"Yes." Katie said. ④ "My favorite color is orange."

“Why orange?” her mother asked.

Katie’s smile faded. “I picked orange because nobody else did, and I didn’t want orange to feel alone,” said Katie. “It must be lonely. I want orange to feel special.”

“Is that how you feel, Katie? Do you feel like orange?”

⑤ Katie became sad. “Mommy, I want to be special. But I’m not.”

“Ah, don’t you see, Katie... you are special.”

“I am?” Katie replied.

“Of course you are. Your decision to choose orange shows how kind you are. You have a very big heart. That’s something to be proud ⑥ (____),” her mother said.

Katie smiled and said, “Orange will be my special color,” and she wrote down her new favorite color on her paper with a crayon. Then she noticed something interesting. She was using an orange crayon all the time. ⑦ That made her happier.

The next afternoon, Katie sat in her favorite chair by the window with all of her new orange items. Every day, she looked out of that window, looked up into the sky and wanted to be special. But today she wished for something different. Today, Katie wished for orange to feel special. “Nobody wants to be ⑧ (____).”

And just as she did, Katie noticed ⑨ something magical. As she looked out of the window, she noticed the beautiful sunset was orange.

She loved orange. It was special, just like Katie.
